NB.i Address varies pre 1875, 17 Warwick Sq Paternoster Row, post 1875 Bridewell Place New Bridge street.

NB.ii. The appearance/disappearance of the Collins Pi suggests the use of two or more transfers.

NB.iii It has been suggested by Professor Twyman of Reading University that this compression was achieved via the use of a flat rubber surface prepared to accept a photographic image, this sheet might or might not be under some form of tension at that time [rather like a trampoline]. Prior to printing it could be increased (stretched) in one direction or reduced in another direction to produce contraction,precisely how is not yet known, and this then asks the question,Why do this?]
